is not discharging its duty as a university, there is a way to address that, other than taking a sham piece of legislation to give the impression that now we're helping rural Nebraska. That's why the rural people need to send people down to this Legislature who are going to do something of value and not play political games and say let me pass a bill so I can say when I run for election this is what I did. And yet nothing of substance comes from it. You all vote for those Union Pacific bills, you vote for LB 775 bills, and they don't help you. Then to show how dumb they think you are, like the Union Pacific bill, they way, well, Senator Vrtiska, looky here what you can do out there in rural Nebraska. If you can get this much money and a company willing to do this, you get some slack. And you know no company is going to come out there. Not...I'm just using Senator Vrtiska because he was looking at me. These bills don't help rural Nebraska, or the people in rural Nebraska are so dumb that with all of this help that you've gotten from LB 775 and all these other economic development bills, all you've been able to do is squander that opportunity, and now you're coming for more. You're losing population. You're losing businesses. Farms are going under. Well, do you know what the problem is? Nebraska is so backwards and its people are so unwilling to face the necessity to change that they're trying to use eighteenth century tactics to survive in the twenty-second century, or whichever one this one is. Senator Landis, which century is this, twenty-first century? Twenty-first century. Thank you, Senator Landis. I've been around my rural colleagues too long. I even lose track of the century that I'm in because I'm listening to the kind of discussions that we have. Now why, if the rural people are going to wage a battle on this floor, don't they wage it for something that is worth something? You keep telling us, just give us something that we can say...shows that we were down there, but it has no substance. And when it's done, nothing has changed for the better. You all have enough votes. If you function as a block to get something out of this Legislature, and if it's possible through legislation, to revitalize rural Nebraska you could do it. But do you know what you do? Well, I got a bill but I don't want to antagonize anybody so I'm not going to put that in it. And that which you don't want to put in it is the very thing that would make it have meaning. Well,
